RECENT TEACHING EXPERIENCE

TEACHING PRIZES AND GRANTS

- 2007 Indiana University Trustees Teaching Award for excellence in teaching (History)
- 2005 Indiana University Trustees Teaching Award for excellence in teaching (Jewish Studies)
- 1999 Japan Foundation Library Foundation Program together with Hitomi Tobe 400,000 Yen for Library Purchasing in Japanese Studies area.
- Higher Education Funding Council of England ‘History 2000’ award together with Hannah Barker for research into improving student communication skills. Value £7449
- 1991 Keele University Teaching Innovation Award (1 term sabbatical + £500) for development of computing for historians course (award shared with Dr Patricia Clavin).

RESEARCH AND INNOVATION IN TEACHING

In 2006–7 I participated in an IU History Learning Project program to address bottlenecks in student teaching. I used a 200 level War and Violence course to address the way students identify and construct argument. The techniques I developed were discussed in a Journal of American History article by Arlene Diaz, Joan Middendorf, David Pace and Leah Shopkow.

In 1997, at Keele University Dr Hannah Barker and I were in receipt of an award from the HEFCE funded project, History 2000. Using this money we designed a modern history course, designed to integrate the teaching of historical and transferable skills into the history curriculum. The course had a particular focus on group working and communication skills. As well as a publication for History 2000, the project also resulted in two First Year history modules which came on stream at Keele in 1999.

In 1991, at Keele University Dr Patricia Clavin and I were in receipt of a Teaching Innovation Award at Keele to design a course on computing for historians. Using a publicly available database of early membership of the Nazi party, students were taught how to construct and analyse a historical database.
